This corporation is trying to take over all phases of America's retailers. Starting with a campaign of "Made in America" WalMart has moved to most products being made in China by virtually slave labor. Paying the China workers the equivalent of 24 cents an hour, requiring them to work 80 hrs a week or they will be replaced, these workers can't afford to buy the products they make.

WalMart has basically put out of business every Mom and Pop stores in small towns across America, they brainwash the American workers into not joining a Union, yet their health benefits fit on one page, basically sending their workers to Government run Medicare/Medicaid programs to afford health care. Now they want to start a bank. What surprises do they have in store, like the "Made in America" campaign to rope in customers?

I don't think a monopoly like WalMart should be allowed to operate in America.
